

Abstract of the Disclosure:

A power semiconductor module is presented in which terminal elements are press-fitted into openings in a plastic housing.

This measure improves the reliability of the internal bonds

5 between the substrate and the terminal element since there is no longer a risk of the terminal elements loosening in the plastic housing.

10 REL/tg